

Μιχάλης Μειμάρης

Professor at the Department of Communication and Mass Media of the University of Athens.

He is founder and director of the Lab of New Technologies in Communication, Education and the Media at the Department of Communication and Mass Media of the University of Athens. He has studied Mathematics at the University of Athens and Statistics and Data Analysis with computers in Paris (University of Paris VI Pierre et Marie Curie).

His research interests focus on New Technologies in Communication, Education and the Media, New Technological Communication Environment, Visual Communication, Multimedia, Open, Flexible and Distant Education, as well as the training of journalists in the field of New Technologies.

Director of the Research University Institute of Applied Communication, member of the International Committee and President of the National Award Committee Möbius, member of the Scientific Council of Maison des Sciences de l'Homme Nord of France and of C.I.T.I. of the University of Lisbon.